

Food for Change

Food can mean more than just a meal.

Food for Change (FFC) is an intervention strategy that aligns with the Houston Food Bank's ambitious vision: a world that doesn't need food banks. The work of Food for Change goes beyond emergency food assistance by addressing the root causes of hunger and therefore "shortening the line" at hunger relief charities. This includes strategically layering food assistance with other social services to help individuals achieve their life goals. FFC partners with a collective of community organizations that provide programming focused on two main areas: health initiatives and economic initiatives.

Health initiatives

Health initiatives are intended to improve quality of life for participants through programs that help them manage their health care needs.

Food Rx provides participants with access to nutritious foods to improve their health. Participants enroll through a Houston Food Bank Food Rx partner organization and redeem healthy groceries at no cost at Food for Change Markets. Partnership examples include:

- Federally qualified health centers
- Health systems
- Community clinics
- Local health departments

Core Connections Network (CCN) is an 8-week self-management course offered by the Houston Food Bank and implemented at partner sites. CCN is designed to empower individuals with a chronic illness to regularly manage their condition, learn skills to make lifestyle changes, and facilitate a partnership with their healthcare providers.

Food for Change Markets

Food for Change Markets distribute groceries at no cost to clients enrolled in Food for Change programs. These markets are brick-and-mortar and mobile pantries located throughout the Houston area, and distribute produce and other healthy items during select Food for Change hours. Participants redeem groceries at FFC Markets twice per month using their FFC ID cards.

All FFC Markets are designed to be client choice, meaning that clients can select their own food. This model allows for clients to meet their personal needs and preferences, reinforces dignity, and reduces food waste.

Strategic change = better future

As Food for Change gathers and analyzes data through our research and academic partnerships, we can make better informed decisions about how we use our resources. We believe that the strategic distribution of nutritious food equates to better quality of life for individuals who have struggled with food insecurity – as captured in the food bank’s mission statement, “Food for better lives.” Ultimately, we seek to integrate this strategy across all operations while placing the wellbeing of clients at the center of all that we do.
